The three pillars of the chart: Lagna, Moon, Sun

Your chart is defined by the ascending sign of Leo (the Lagna, or foundational point of the horoscope), making the Sun your ruling planet. The house lords table indicates that your ruler, the Sun, is placed in the 12th house (the area of isolation, expenditures, and foreign environments) in the sign of Cancer. Because the Sun is a functional benefic for your chart, its placement here directs your life path toward internal exploration, working behind the scenes, or operating in foreign lands.

The Shadbala (a quantified measure of planetary strength) calculation shows the Sun is highly powerful at 7.25 rupas (units of strength), giving you strong vitality and leadership potential even when functioning away from the public eye. The system identifies the Sun as your Atmakaraka (the primary planet representing the path of your soul). This confirms that asserting your individuality and finding your core inner authority is the central lesson of your life.

For your career and professional advisors, the Amatyakaraka (the minister planet) is Saturn. The house lords table shows Saturn placed in the 3rd house of effort and communication, where it is in a state of exaltation (its highest natural dignity). This powerful Saturn demands disciplined, structured effort in your daily initiatives and ensures that your professional success comes through immense persistence. A dominant feature in your chart is the grouping of four planets in the 12th house: the Sun, Moon, Mars, and Mercury.

The yoga (special planetary combination) calculations reveal that this specific grouping creates a Pravrajya Yoga, which naturally inclines you toward introspection, spiritual pursuits, or a life prioritizing inner wealth over material accumulation. Within this same house, the union of the Sun and Mercury forms a Budha-Aditya Yoga, granting you high intelligence and analytical skills that are best applied in research, secluded work, or foreign affairs.

Furthermore, the presence of the Sun and Mars here generates two powerful Kendra-Trikona Raja Yogas, indicating that despite the hidden nature of your work, your actions will ultimately lead to significant authority and success. Your birth nakshatra (lunar mansion) is Pushya, which brings a nurturing and supportive quality to your emotional core. However, the Shadbala table reveals that your Moon is the weakest planet in your chart, scoring only 3.82 rupas.

The avastha (planetary state) calculation further classifies the Moon as critically weak. Since the Moon rules your 12th house and sits within it, you may find that managing your emotional energy requires conscious effort, as your inner foundation can easily feel depleted without proper rest. You are currently navigating the maha-dasha (major planetary period) of Venus, which began in August 2013 and runs until August 2033. Venus rules your 3rd house of courage and your 10th house of career, and the house lords table places it comfortably in the 11th house of gains.

Within this major cycle, you are in the antar-dasha (sub-period) of Saturn from June 2026 until August 2029, and specifically the pratyantar-dasha (sub-sub-period) of Saturn until December 2026. Because Saturn is an exalted functional malefic in your 3rd house, this current phase requires strict discipline and hard work, often bringing delays but rewarding highly structured, self-directed efforts. The remedy calculations indicate specific measures to balance your planetary energies.

Your Sun and Mars both show high Kashta (a measure of stress or malefic influence), scoring 33.0 and 41.5 respectively. The remedy data strictly warns against wearing gemstones for these two planets, as doing so would only amplify stress in their respective areas; instead, they require pacification and stress reduction techniques. To support your weaker planets, the calculations recommend chanting specific mantras: "OM GURAVE NAMAHA" for Jupiter on Thursdays (19,000 times), "OM SHUKRAYA NAMAHA" for Venus on Fridays (16,000 times), and "OM CHANDRAYA NAMAHA" for the Moon on Mondays (11,000 times).

Where life is concentrated: the distribution across houses

Your chart opens with the Lagna (the ascendant sign determining your life's orientation) in Leo. The lord of this sign is the Sun, which acts as a functional benefic (a planet that naturally brings favorable results for your specific ascendant). The house lord placement table shows that the Sun is positioned in Cancer in the 12th house, indicating that your core focus and life path are strongly tied to foreign lands, isolated work environments, or deep spiritual pursuits. The Shadbala (a calculation grid measuring overall planetary strength) reveals that Mercury is your strongest planet with a score of 7.78 rupas (units of strength), making it highly capable of delivering its results in your life. Conversely, the Moon is your weakest planet, scoring only 3.82 rupas. Because the Moon governs the mind and emotional foundation, the strength table suggests you must consciously build emotional resilience and avoid overextending your mental energy. Your Sun is also notably strong at 7.25 rupas and serves as the AK or Atmakaraka (the "king of the chart" representing the soul's primary path). The avastha (planetary state) calculations show the Sun is in a "Mudita" (delighted) condition. This positive state allows the Sun to guide your life journey effectively, even from its hidden position in the 12th house. The yoga (special planetary combination) calculations identify five distinct formations in your chart, starting with two instances of the Kendra-Trikona Raja Yoga involving the Sun and Mars. This powerful combination brings success, authority, and elevation in life when you align with your higher purpose. You also have the Gajakesari Yoga formed by Jupiter and the Moon, which grants wisdom, a good reputation, and financial stability, especially when you act with generosity toward others. Additionally, the Budha-Aditya Yoga is present with the Sun and Mercury in the 12th house, granting a strong intellect and sharp analytical skills that are highly useful in research or foreign affairs. You also have the Pravrajya Yoga, which involves four planets—Sun, Moon, Mars, and Mercury—gathered in the 12th house. This highly specific combination pulls your focus toward spirituality, detachment, and intensive work in solitary or foreign environments. You are currently in the Maha-dasha (major planetary period) of Venus, which runs from August 29, 2013, until August 28, 2033. The house lord calculations show Venus rules your 3rd house of effort and 10th house of career, and sits in the 11th house of gains in a friendly sign. This period emphasizes building your professional network, achieving long-term ambitions, and earning through your own structured initiatives. Within this major period, you are experiencing the Antar-dasha (sub-period) of Saturn, active from June 26, 2026, to August 25, 2029. Saturn acts as your AmK or Amatyaakaraka (the minister planet guiding career and professional counselors). Because Saturn is exalted (in its state of maximum natural strength) in the 3rd house, this phase requires disciplined effort, courage, and highly structured communication to advance your professional goals. The remedies calculation highlights that both the Sun and Mars have high Kashta (a measure of stress or hardship), scoring 33.0 and 41.5 respectively. Because of this high stress level in their spheres, the system strictly warns against wearing gemstones for these planets, as doing so would only amplify the tension. Instead, these planets require pacification through active stress reduction and calming routines. To support your weaker planets, the remedy table suggests the following specific mantras:

- Jupiter requires chanting "OM GURAVE NAMAHA" 19,000 times on Thursdays to strengthen its positive qualities and support its weak Shadbala score. - Venus benefits from chanting "OM SHUKRAYA NAMAHA" 16,000 times on Fridays to enhance your current major period. - Moon is supported by chanting "OM CHANDRAYA NAMAHA" 11,000 times on Mondays to fortify your emotional foundation. A note about calculations not included stands at the end of the document.

Planetary states: who works at full strength

Your rising sign, or Lagna (the constellation on the eastern horizon at your birth), is Leo. This makes the Sun your chart ruler, representing your physical vitality and primary life focus. The calculation shows the Sun is placed in the 12th house of foreign lands, solitude, and introspection, sitting in the sign of Cancer. Because the Sun is also your Atmakaraka (the "King of the chart" defining your soul's main path), your life journey is deeply connected to spiritual pursuits, working behind the scenes, or living far from your birthplace. Looking at the Shadbala table (a quantitative measure of planetary strength), your planets show a wide range of power measured in rupas (units of strength). Mercury is the strongest planet in your chart with an impressive 7.78 rupas, giving you a sharp, analytical intellect and a strong capacity for research. Conversely, the Moon is the weakest planet at 3.82 rupas, indicating that maintaining emotional stability and inner peace requires conscious effort. Saturn, acting as your Amatyakaraka (the "Minister" representing career and advisors), is robust at 5.24 rupas and sits exalted in your 3rd house, granting you immense discipline and practical skills in your professional life. The condition of your life areas depends heavily on where their ruling planets are placed. For example, your 4th house of home and 9th house of fortune are ruled by Mars, which sits in the 12th house in a state of debilitation. When a house ruler is placed in a difficult house or sign, the themes it governs demand extra effort and patience to flourish over time. Similarly, your 5th and 8th house ruler, Jupiter, is placed in the 6th house in a debilitated and retrograde state, meaning that matters of education, investments, and profound transformations will require careful management and resilience. Your chart contains five specific yogas (auspicious planetary combinations) that shape your potential. These combinations unfold their highest potential when you actively align your lifestyle with their inherent themes:

- Kendra-Trikona Raja Yoga appears twice, offering powerful combinations for success, authority, and clarity of life purpose. - Gajakesari Yoga generally blesses you with wisdom, eloquence, and a respected reputation in society. - Budha-Aditya Yoga grants you high intelligence, analytical capabilities, and strong communication skills. - Pravrajya Yoga strongly inclines you toward spiritual seeking, deep detachment, or intensive focused work in isolation. You are currently in the major planetary period, or maha-dasha, of Venus, which began in August 2013 and runs until August 2033. Venus rules your 3rd house of courage and 10th house of career, making this a long-term cycle focused on professional development, communication, and personal effort. Within this larger cycle, you are navigating the sub-period (antar-dasha) and sub-sub-period (pratyantar-dasha) of Saturn, which lasts until late December 2026. Because Saturn is exalted and strong in your chart, this specific timeframe demands structured hard work, discipline, and a highly organized approach to your daily routines and collaborations. To balance the energies in your chart, the calculations suggest specific remedies based on planetary stress levels and weaknesses. The Sun and Mars both have a high Kashta score (a measure of planetary stress), meaning they require calming rather than stimulation; therefore, wearing gemstones for these planets is strictly not recommended as it would increase tension. To support your weaker planets, you can use sound vibrations through specific chants to stabilize your emotional and material foundations:

- For Jupiter, recite OM GURAVE NAMAHA 19,000 times on Thursdays. - For Venus, recite OM SHUKRAYA NAMAHA 16,000 times on Fridays. - For the Moon, recite OM CHANDRAYA NAMAHA 11,000 times on Mondays.

The Lagna and its lord: your basic setting

Your chart begins with the Lagna (the rising sign on the eastern horizon at the exact moment of birth) placed in Leo at 13.3°. This specific degree establishes your baseline operational tempo and the way you naturally enter into new situations. Leo is a sign characterized by stability, confidence, and a natural inclination to take charge of your environment. Because of this foundation, your default approach to life is self-reliant; you prefer to operate from a position of authority and expect a certain level of autonomy in your daily endeavors.

The planet that governs your rising sign acts as the manager of your physical and personal trajectory; for Leo, this is the Sun. The Shadbala (a mathematical system evaluating total planetary strength) table shows your Sun holds 7.25 rupas (units of power), making it the second strongest planet in your entire chart. This high objective strength means your core vitality, physical resilience, and central sense of purpose are highly developed. When faced with challenges, your fundamental energy reserves are robust, allowing you to push through obstacles without easily losing your sense of self.

The calculation places your strong Sun at 28.7° in the 12th house of your chart. The 12th house governs foreign lands, isolation, expenditures, and activities conducted away from the public eye. Because the ruler of your personality is positioned here, there is a distinct contrast in your basic setting: while you have the inherent confidence of a Leo, your actual life path pulls you toward behind-the-scenes work, private research, or international environments.

You are designed to exert your leadership and strong vitality in closed or specialized spaces, meaning you must deliberately switch on your outward, public-facing persona when the situation demands it. Within this 12th house, the Sun sits in the sign of Cancer, which the calculation identifies as a friend's sign for the Sun. This friendly dignity indicates that the private or isolated environments you navigate are ultimately supportive rather than draining.

Additionally, the dispositor (the planet that rules the sign where another is placed) for your Sun is the Moon, and the facts show the Moon is located in the exact same sign and house. This creates a deeply self-contained dynamic where your physical trajectory and your inner emotional state are securely linked, operating smoothly together in matters of retreat, foreign affairs, or quiet contemplation. From its hidden position, your Sun casts a drishti (a planetary aspect or gaze) directly across the chart onto your 6th house of daily work, service, and problem-solving.

This means your substantial, behind-the-scenes energy is constantly directed toward managing practical routines and overcoming operational hurdles. Recognizing how your natural Leo drive is channeled through private environments to solve practical problems is the foundational step in understanding your natal chart. Note: Any calculations or topics not explicitly mentioned above were not included in the provided data.

The Moon and the nakshatra: your inner order

The Moon in your chart is positioned at 13.8° of Cancer, residing comfortably in its own sign. According to the calculation, it occupies the 12th house, an area representing retreat, solitude, and spaces away from the public eye. The strength table reveals that your lunar energy scores a 25, marking it as critically weak. This low score indicates that your emotional resilience has strict limits, making your inner peace delicate and easily exhausted by the outside world. Your birth nakshatra (the specific lunar mansion that shapes your mental framework) is Pushya, and it falls in the fourth pada (quarter). Pushya carries themes of nourishment, deep care, and the sustained support of others. Because your mind is rooted in this space, you naturally seek to foster growth and provide a safe harbor for those you value. Yet, because your emotional core is critically weak, trying to sustain this level of care without adequate boundaries will quickly deplete your reserves. The planetary state calculations add specific layers to your emotional reactions. Your Moon is listed as Svastha (healthy) and Garvita (proud), showing an underlying dignity in how you handle your private feelings. It is also in the Yuva (youth) state, bringing an active, engaged quality to your inner world. However, its final state is Nidra (deep sleep), which aligns perfectly with its 12th house placement, suggesting that your mind requires profound rest and literal withdrawal to function properly. The pressure matrix of your chart shows a significant challenge to this need for rest. Saturn casts a direct aspect (a line of influence) from the 3rd house onto the 12th house, striking the Moon and the other planets gathered there. This heavy gaze from Saturn imposes severe discipline, restriction, and a sense of duty upon your mind and your peace. Under heavy load, you do not lash out; instead, you retreat inward, forced by this pressure to isolate yourself to process the mental crowding. For you, the concept of "home" is less about a physical address and more about a secure, isolated sanctuary where demands cease. Your energy fluctuates based on very specific environmental factors:

- You are heavily depleted by environments that force constant engagement or where strict duties override your need for rest. - You are restored by absolute solitude, quiet retreat, and deliberate disconnection from daily routines. Acknowledging this delicate emotional architecture is a vital step in working with your Natal chart.

The strong and the weak points of the chart

The planetary strength calculation in your natal chart is based on Shadbala (a six-fold system evaluating a planet's exact power). The strength is measured in rupas (quantifiable units of planetary energy). According to the Shadbala ranking, your strongest planet is Mercury, scoring an impressive 7.78 rupas. This indicates a very strong natural capacity for intellect, analysis, and communication. However, the calculations also show that Mercury is combust (positioned only 7.3 degrees from the Sun), which means its immense energy operates under the overwhelming glare of the Sun, often making your intellectual processes highly internalized or causing your ideas to go unnoticed unless you actively push them forward.

The strength table shows two other planets operating with high power: the Sun at 7.25 rupas and Saturn at 5.24 rupas. A strong Sun grants you natural authority, resilience, and a solid sense of self, giving you the endurance to push through obstacles. Saturn's strength provides you with inherent discipline, patience, and the ability to handle long-term responsibilities without burning out. Together, these two planets form a sturdy backbone for your chart, ensuring that you have both the willpower to initiate actions and the stamina to see them through to completion.

Sitting in the middle of the ranking is Mars, evaluated at 4.18 rupas, giving it an average status. This suggests that your drive, courage, and ability to assert yourself are present but not overwhelmingly dominant. Like Mercury, Mars is also combust, positioned 8.8 degrees from the Sun. This proximity means your physical energy and assertiveness might fluctuate, sometimes feeling suppressed by circumstances or authorities, requiring you to carefully manage your conflicts and physical exertion.

The lower half of the Shadbala grid highlights areas where you must exert conscious effort, specifically with Jupiter and Venus. Jupiter scores 4.37 rupas and Venus scores 4.02 rupas, both classified as weak by the calculation. A weak Jupiter suggests that finding your overarching philosophy, optimism, or financial expansion may require deliberate seeking rather than coming naturally. Similarly, the low score of Venus implies that matters of diplomacy, romantic relationships, and finding worldly comforts demand patience and continuous, mindful cultivation on your part.

The weakest planet in your Shadbala ranking is the Moon, scoring only 3.82 rupas. Because the Moon represents your mind, emotions, and inner peace, this low score indicates a tendency toward emotional fatigue or difficulty in maintaining mental stability under heavy stress. You must prioritize mental rest and practical grounding techniques to support your inner equilibrium. Ultimately, understanding this distribution of energy in your natal chart allows you to lean confidently on your intellectual and disciplined strengths while consciously supporting your emotional and relational vulnerabilities.

The yogas of the chart: combinations that work

The calculation identifies exactly five active yogas (specific planetary combinations that produce distinct life results) in your chart. These configurations are not automatic guarantees of fame or wealth, but rather concentrated potentials that require specific conditions to unfold. The strength table shows that most of these combinations operate at a high capacity, demanding your conscious participation to yield their best effects. The first major formations are two instances of the Kendra-Trikona Raja Yoga (a royal combination granting success and authority).

Both are formed by the Sun and Mars operating at high strength. Because these planets unite in the 12th house of your chart, the authority and success they promise will not manifest in highly public, conventional ways. Instead, you gain leadership and status through foreign connections, behind-the-scenes administration, or work related to research and places of retreat. You also have a highly expressed Gajakesari Yoga (a combination for prosperity and respect) involving Jupiter and the Moon.

This configuration grants a strong reputation, wisdom, and the ability to overcome obstacles through steady judgment. For this potential to materialize, you must rely on ethical principles and continuous learning, utilizing your knowledge to guide others even when facing challenging circumstances. The calculation highlights a high-strength Budha-Aditya Yoga involving the Sun and Mercury in the 12th house. This specific pairing sharpens the intellect and grants excellent analytical and communicative abilities.

Given its placement, this mental acuity is best applied to deep research, foreign affairs, or complex problem-solving done in private rather than on a public stage. Finally, the chart features a moderately strong Pravrajya Yoga formed by the gathering of the Sun, Moon, Mars, and Mercury in the 12th house. This is a combination that brings a profound capacity to detach from ordinary worldly pursuits. In practical terms, it gives you the ability to immerse yourself completely in focused work, spiritual practices, or foreign environments, finding your greatest strength when you step away from the noise of the crowd.

These combinations form the unique architecture of your natal chart. They show that your path to success, wealth, and intellectual achievement is deeply tied to the unseen, the foreign, and the internal, requiring you to cultivate focus away from the conventional spotlight.

The periods ahead, by the calculation

The planetary timeline reveals that you are currently navigating the maha-dasha (major planetary period) of Venus, a cycle that began in August 2013 and will conclude on August 28, 2033. The strength table indicates that Venus holds 4.02 rupas (quantified units of planetary strength), which classifies it as weak in your specific planetary alignment. Because Venus is positioned in your 11th house in the sign of Gemini, this twenty-year span favours social networking, group collaborations, and defining your highest ambitions. However, the low strength score suggests that achieving these material or social goals requires conscious, sustained effort on your part, rather than relying on sheer luck or effortless charm. Zooming in on the present moment, the calculation shows that you are currently in the antar-dasha (sub-period) of Saturn, which began on June 26, 2026, and extends until August 25, 2029. Furthermore, until December 26, 2026, the pratyantar-dasha (sub-sub-period) is also ruled by Saturn, making its influence exceptionally concentrated right now. According to the Shadbala (six-fold strength system) table, Saturn is strong, possessing 5.24 rupas, and it occupies its sign of exaltation in your 3rd house. This specific alignment strongly favours disciplined communication, structured skill-building, and taking calculated initiatives in your daily environment. While the overarching Venus period might lack innate vitality, the current strong Saturn sub-period acts as a stabilizing force, providing the endurance needed to materialize your goals. This phase favours a highly pragmatic approach to your ambitions, asking you to rely on patience and organization. It is an excellent time to methodically organize your resources, focus on practical short-term projects, and build reliable routines that support your long-term objectives. Looking further ahead, a significant transition occurs on August 28, 2033, when you enter the major period of the Sun, which will guide your path until August 2039. The Shadbala table reveals that the Sun is robustly supported with 7.25 rupas, making it a highly influential and strong planet in your chart. Positioned in the 12th house in Cancer, this upcoming cycle shifts the focus away from outward social gains and favours turning your attention inward. This period is highly conducive to:

- Exploring foreign lands or engaging with distant cultures.
- Working in quiet, secluded, or research-oriented environments.
- Deepening your spiritual practices or psychological understanding.

Preparing for this shift involves recognizing that the outgoing, network-oriented energy of Venus will eventually give way to the introspective, self-directed power of the Sun. By tracking these calculated timelines, you can align your current efforts with the structural demands of Saturn, knowing that it builds the necessary practical foundation for the future. Ultimately, observing these cyclical shifts allows you to engage with the natural rhythms and unfolding potential embedded within your natal chart.

What to do next

The calculation of your chart identifies five priority planets that require conscious work to balance your daily life. The remedy system divides these into two groups: those that need pacification due to high stress, and those that need strengthening because they lack foundational power. By looking at the Shadbala (a comprehensive system of planetary strength) and Kashta (a measure of stressful or harsh effects) values, we can determine exactly where to begin your efforts.

The Sun and Mars demand immediate pacification to reduce the pressure they generate. The strength table shows a high Kashta score for both—33.0 for the Sun and 41.5 for Mars. Because both planets are placed in the 12th house of isolation and hidden matters, this stress is likely internal and draining. The calculation explicitly warns against using gemstones for the Sun and Mars; amplifying them with stones will only increase the harshness and stress.

Instead, manage this energy through behavioral adjustments. Practice anonymous charity and engage in solitary, non-competitive routines, allowing the intense martial and solar energy to dissipate safely behind the scenes rather than burning you out. Conversely, the Moon, Jupiter, and Venus are weak according to their Shadbala scores and require active strengthening. For these planets, careful use of gemstones is permissible, but disciplined behavioral practices and mantras form the core of the remedy.

The Moon is the weakest planet by Shadbala in your chart and sits in the 12th house. To support it, recite the mantra "OM CHANDRAYA NAMAHA" on Mondays, aiming for a total of 11,000 repetitions over time. Pair this vocal practice with emotional retreats, ensuring you have quiet, solitary spaces to recharge your inner batteries and practice anonymous care for others. Jupiter is also weak by Shadbala and is located in the 6th house of service, health, and problem-solving.

Strengthen this planet by chanting "OM GURAVE NAMAHA" on Thursdays for a total of 19,000 repetitions. Behaviorally, you can support Jupiter by offering structured help to those in need, engaging in disciplined health routines, or volunteering your time to assist others in overcoming their daily obstacles. For Venus, which occupies the 11th house of networks and gains, recite "OM SHUKRAYA NAMAHA" on Fridays for a total of 16,000 repetitions. Because it operates in the sphere of communities and ambitions, support Venus by fostering supportive connections in your social circles and participating generously in group endeavors.

These recommendations are a method of working with your own habits and reactions, not a ritual for instant rewards. By intentionally calming the high-stress areas and nourishing the depleted ones, you harmonize your daily actions with the unique blueprint of your Natal chart. Note: Any calculations or planetary details not explicitly mentioned in the provided facts were omitted from this analysis.
